NATIONAL SEARCH CENTER FOR MISSING & TRAFFICKED CHILDREN

The Russians Are Coming!

Our analysts have found a growing trend in several cities in Southern states – online advertisements for sexual services by Russian girls. These ads are popping up in cities for approximately a week and then reappearing in another city one or two weeks later.

Recent interviews with airport workers have also shown an increase in the number of Russian girls arriving into the country. Some of these girls have indicated their arrival is for work at area hotels and resorts.

One airport worker recalled an 18-year-old Russian girl arriving at the airport to work at a local hotel and no one showed to pick the girl

Welcome to our Indications & Warning Report

Our analysts have prepared this report to provide you with current events, trends and analysis concerning missing children and trafficking situations affecting the United States.

Attention Mall Shoppers

The recruitment of teenage girls for the underground world of child sex trafficking is occurring at our favorite shopping destinations.

Katie Faye King, 21, was charged Monday in federal court in Alexandria, VA with sex trafficking. King approached a 14-year-old girl at the Tysons Corner Center mall to see if she was interested in modeling. When the girl told King she was 14, King said she could lie and tell everyone she was 18.

King lured the 14-year old to her hotel room at a local Courtyard by Marriott. King took photos of the girl with her cell phone and transferred them to her “boss” (the trafficker) in Las Vegas. Once the boss, whom FBI officials have identified as a Las Vegas pimp, received the photos he contacted King and agreed that the girl had “the look”.

up. After talking with a USO volunteer, the young girl was given a ride to the hotel.

NGO's and Rescue and Restore coalitions should consider providing training to airport security/TSA and other airport employees in identification and reporting procedures for potential trafficking victims.

Life on the Streets

A teenage runaway was kidnapped and forced into prostitution in New York and found shaking and beaten after she bolted from her captor's car earlier in the week.

The girl was taken to a hotel where she met a pregnant woman who had been beaten with a coat hanger by the suspect. Police said the suspect allegedly forced the girl "to work as a prostitute 24-7". He refused to pay the girl and threatened to kill her.

Upon leaving the hotel, the teen allegedly heard the suspect call someone and ask that person to scrub the hotel room of any trace of her previous presence. Officials state, "he beat her during the ride, telling her that he was going to kill her and dump her body in the woods."

With 1.6 to 2.8 million children living on our streets, this type of nightmare is occurring more often than we want to believe.

Border Fight

The fighting along the U.S./ Mexico border has intensified over the past several weeks. The viciousness of this fight is evident in the brutality and gruesome nature of the increasing murders.

As these border towns become ground zero for the warring cartels and police, trafficked children become caught in the crossfire. Spillage into the other ancillary businesses in these towns, such as sex trafficking, will occur.

A growing concern in recent months has been the increase in "reverse trafficking." The transit of U.S. based trafficking rings crossing the borders to sell their kids in the border towns. These gangs and other organizations may be unwittingly crossing the front lines of this battle and can only mean increasing danger for these child victims.
